MR. JANVIER RESIGNS.

Increased pressure of private affairs demands so much of my time that I find it impossible to longer give proper attention to my duties on this paper and I have accordingly resigned as editor of The Ledger to become effective Saturday, September 25.

Having had this move under consideration for the last week or ten days, I did not, after the close of the contest, re-establish the editorials and again put the paper up to the high standard maintained previous thereto, as I considered it only fair and just that my successor, whoever he might be, should find a clear field for the free exercise of his ideas.

It is with regret that I sever a relationship that has been both cordial and pleasant and in saying farewell to The Ledger and its many subscribers, I wish to express my appreciation of the kindly reception that has been accorded my modest efforts and to speak a good word for the management, which is energetic and competent, and which will, with your patience and co-operation, continue to give you the same first-class paper that you have been accustomed to receive in The Ledger.

JOHN JANVIER.

In referring to the above, it is with reluctance that we part company with Mr. Janvier. Our associations with him, both social and business, have been the most pleasant. In his new fields we wish him every success, and are quite sure that laurels will crown his efforts. Here's luck to you, Jack. C. E. DIETRICH, General Manager.

TRUANT OFFICER BUSY.

Captain John L. Walsh, truant officer, took into custody a boy about 12 years old, claiming Cincinnati as his home. He has been working on an ice wagon he claims. He also has been persuading the boys to play truant from school, and induced several to leave for Cincinnati. Captain Walsh took the boy before Judge W. H. Rice, who sent him to Cincinnati.

Mrs. W. O. Blackerby, of Brooksville, and daughter, Mrs. Emmitt Brizell, of New Jersey, have been the guests of the former's brother, Mr. Gordon Gilmore, and family, this week.

CITY MISSION NOTES.

The City Mission has been without a trained worker during the summer months, but Mrs. Robert Picklin, the faithful president of the Board of City Missions, has kept open the home, caring for all cases of distress and need that have been presented to her. She has also given shelter to several homeless woman and children under the Mission roof. Every effort is being made to secure an efficient, trained worker to take up the fall duties.

It is hoped that by the middle of October will see the work under the right supervision. We are not in position yet to make any positive announcements for the future except the night school, Sunday school and Tuesday evening meetings.

Mrs. Picklin has distributed the following garments and provisions during the summer months:

One hundred and ninety-seven garments; twenty-nine pairs of shoes, most of them for school children; fourteen hats; seven baskets of provisions; seventy-nine olives of bread; twenty-seven pounds of honey, contributed by a county friend; nine pecks of potatoes, donated by one of our merchants; twelve heads of cabbage; five persons given meal tickets; beef broth made and given in several cases of sickness; money paid out for groceries and provisions, $32.19; two families in direct poverty given necessary articles of kitchen furnishings and dishes.

The Settlement Club gave their services in sewing one day, the garments made supplementing the donated clothing in a most substantial way.

FLAG RAISED

PUPILS OF MAYSVILLE PUBLIC SCHOOLS RAISE "OLD GLORY" WITH APPROPRIATE CEREMONIES BEFORE LARGE CROWD OF ONLOOKERS.

Friday afternoon about 3 o'clock the pupils of Maysville's public schools gathered on the north campus of the High School building, where the "Stars and Stripes" were hoisted to the winds with appropriate ceremonies. Long before the time of the flag-raising, the streets about the campus were crowded with onlookers and Chief of Police James Mackey and a corps of assistants were kept busy keeping the streets clear so as not to block traffic. Promptly at the appointed hour Miss Hartelrode, Supervisor of Music in the public schools, stepped on the platform, raised her baton and the children sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," after which Superintendent Caplinger delivered a few well-chosen remarks about the flag and the connection of Kentucky with the National Emblem.

Following these remarks, the drum and bugle corps, composed of Messrs. Nelson Breeze, J. H. Randolph and E. L. Perry, rendered the stirring piece, "The Call to the Colors," and the children of the schools then sang "My Old Kentucky Home," under the leadership of Miss Hartelrode. "The Star-Spangled Banner" was then sung, and the oath of allegiance to the flag was given to the scholars by Superintendent Caplinger. The affair closed with the drum corps playing the "disperse."

The flag is a beautiful one, ten by eighteen feet, purchased by the Board of Education from the Lyceum Fund. It will be raised and lowered each day during the school term with appropriate exercises.

SOME PERPLEXITIES OF EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Among the manuscripts preserved in the state archives at Washington is an old copy book written when he was but 14 years old, by the man for whom the city was named. Most interesting of all the memoranda set down carefully in the boyish handwriting are what George Washington quaintly called "Rules of Civility and Decent Behavior in Company and Conversation." And one of these rules is, "Be not forward, but friendly and courteous; the first to salute, hear and answer, and be not pensive when it is time to converse."

If as a boy he studied such maxims, do you wonder that Washington was all his life noted for his fine manners? The rules of courtesy were thought to be a very important part of a gentleman's education in the eighteenth century. A man was considered ignorant and illbred if in his intercourse with the world he omitted certain little acts of politeness. What gentleman of the old school ever permitted himself to remain seated when ladies were standing or to smoke in their presence without first asking permission?

When they were invited out, our ancestors were brought up to believe that due respect to the host and hostess demanded that each guest make himself as agreeable as possible; hence the quaint maxim copied out so carefully by the young George Washington: "Be not pensive when it is time to converse." The man of the present day too often takes the attitude that he is conferring a favor by accepting an invitation; and expects to be amused and entertained without contributing anything.

Old fashioned courtesy taught that deference must at all times be paid to age. A hundred years ago little boys and girls were told the "mannerly manners" if perhaps the "dominie" or the schoolmaster or any one of position or authority spoke to them; and the small lads would bow deeply and the tiny maids would curtsy most respectfully. Such airs and graces, pretty though they were, would be out of place in our more strenuous times. Yet there is no reason why our young people's manners should not be as good, if of necessity less formal, than those of our ancestors.

If children are taught to be deferential to their elders, to be polite and generous to their playfellows, and are instructed in all the small courtesies of the table and drawing room prescribed by etiquette, they will have been given a heritage by their parents that will be of inestimable value in after life. For a thorough acquaintance with the fundamental rules of good breeding gives an ease of manner that can be acquired in no other way; and it helps wonderfully in the fight for success we all must wage.

The American Association for the study of Spondylitis (get it right) turned up a sensation when a physician announced that he had successfully turned the skin of a colored woman's leg white by freezing it with ether. Spondylitis, that's right, you've got it—but hanged if we know whether it's a fish or a bird.

GET AWAY FROM THE GOLDEN RULE AND YOU PAY FOR IT.

By Sophie Irene Loeb.
The law of compensation will take care of everything. If a man does a small, mean act he will pay for it some day. If a ruler does a great and terrible act he will pay for it some time. If a nation plunges into war it will pay. Its debt will be collected promptly.

These are the words of Henry Ford, the profit-sharing manufacturer, who knows men and their mistakes. This old-time doctrine, of course, has not been worked out with mathematical precision; but the history of everyday experience shows that there is "something in it."

One thing is certain—that in the course of human events the hope of reward and the fear of punishment play no small part in the every-minute activities of the individual. There is one homely truth that can not be eliminated and is explainable. It is this: If you do a thing for good your own attitude toward it creates in the minds of others its good intention, and in turn influences their attitude toward it; and so reaches out indefinitely.

If you create a wrongful influence, those whom you are trying to impress "wake up," as it were, to your purpose, and thus it rebounds to you.

The other day a man complained bitterly of a one-time friend who had suddenly foreclosed on a mortgage and wrought such havoc that the victim had never recovered from it. "And yet he rides around in automobiles," he said, sadly, "has the best of everything and life seems so easy for him." Had this sufferer known the truth he would have realized that the very man who caused his ruin was the more unhappy man of the two. For the child that he loved better than anything else in the world was being slowly but surely taken from him with a dread disease before his very eyes.

Another man once told me of the woman who had "wrecked his life," and who was now the "happy wife of another." I saw this woman not long since, and she is a most miserable creature, because she bartered herself for a house in the country, a retinue of servants and a limousine.

Again, there is a young girl of my acquaintance who has been very unkind to her old mother—the mother who had pinched and saved to give her every chance. And now that the mother is gone, her grief and longing are more than she can bear.

And so it goes. Indeed, indeed, you pay! In the vernacular, "you can't get away with it!" Trite as it may seem, as soon as you get very far away from the little old golden rule, you have to pay—sometimes dearly—to get back to its wholesome precepts.

Many Maysville People Know the Importance of Healthy Kidneys

The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. Well kidneys remove impurities. Weak kidneys allow impurities to multiply.

No kidney ill should be neglected. There is possible danger in delay. If you have backache or urinary troubles,

If you are nervous, dizzy or worn out, Begin treating your kidneys at once; Use a proven kidney remedy. None endorsed like Doan's Kidney Pills.

Recommended by thousands. Proved by Maysville testimony. Lang Stevens, Maysville, says: "My kidneys were out of order and I had backache, which extended into my kidneys. The kidney action was irregular. Doan's Kidney Pills had been used in my family, so I gave them a trial. They helped me greatly."

FAMILY AVOIDS SERIOUS SICKNESS

By Being Constantly Supplied With Theford's Black-Draught.

McDuff, Va.—"I suffered for several years," says Mrs. J. B. Whitaker, of this place, "with sick headache, and stomach trouble."

Ten years ago a friend told me to try Theford's Black-Draught, which I did, and I found it to be the best family medicine for young and old.

I keep Black-Draught on hand all the time now, and when my children feel a little bad, they ask me for a dose, and it does them more good than any medicine they ever tried.

We never have a long spell of sickness in our family, since we commenced using Black-Draught. Theford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, and has been found to regulate weak stomachs, aid digestion, relieve indigestion, colic, wind, nausea, headache, sick stomach, and similar symptoms.

It has been in constant use for more than 70 years, and has benefited more than a million people.

Your druggist sells and recommends Black-Draught. Price only 25c. Get a package to-day.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL.

(Portsmouth Times.)
Even the best of critics get fooled once in a while.

Take the case of Third Baseman Emmer, for instance. Last spring while here he looked like a very ordinary player and he was permitted to slip away to another club. Emmer kept developing and before July 1 rolled around he was regarded as the best third sacker in the league and at the close of the season was peddled for $1,500. You never can tell what a player will do by watching him work but a few days in the spring.

Literature is a long word. Litter is shorter and covers most of the ground.

"THE LAND OF MILK AND HONEY."

The tourist generally enters Palestine by the open port of Jaffa and goes up to Jerusalem by the single narrow gauge railway which connects these two places. He crosses the Plain of Sharon, and then the train slowly climbs the mountains of Judea to Jerusalem. In spring, the Plain of Sharon is green with fine wheat fields studded with gorgeous red anemones, and they give the impression of a land of fertility. This, however, is soon lost after the traveler has been in the mountain country for a time. Unless he is a close observer and somewhat familiar with conditions in semi-arid regions, his question would probably be: "Where is the land flowing with milk and honey?" To really understand the agricultural possibilities of Palestine one must remain some time in the country and study the conditions that here obtain.

The country is decidedly unique in its physical formation. The deep depression or geological fault known as the Jordan Valley, formed in prehistoric times by volcanic action, divides its throughout its entire length. The formation is of various grades of limestone or Nubian sandstone. In the mountain region of western Palestine the soil is thin except in the valleys where it has accumulated from the washing down of the mountain sides. In many places the old terraces, owing to centuries of neglect, have broken down, and to this is due the great loss of soil from the mountain slopes.

Notwithstanding the fact that the soil is in many places thin, in most cases the limestone rock below is full of large crevices and pockets, where the roots of trees find considerable rich, moist mold. The soil is of a clayey mixture mixed with disintegrated limestone and has a wonderful adaption for holding moisture, which fact is fully demonstrated by the raising of summer crops, which will be referred to later on.

The next characteristic which gives Palestine great advantages, especially in fruit raising, is the very considerable differences in altitude found in so small a territory. The country lies between north latitude 30 degrees and 34 degrees; that is to say, the latitude of Jerusalem is about the same as Savannah, Ga., or San Diego, Cal. The variation of altitude, and consequently of climate, ranges from sea-level to 2,600 feet above at Jerusalem, and falling to 1,300 feet below sea-level at the shores of the Dead sea.

The country around Jaffa is well adapted to the growing of excellent oranges, dates, grapes and a number of other fruits, as well as cereals, legumes, etc. This section is underlain by an apparently inexhaustible artesian underflow, which is being utilized for the irrigation of orange groves.

The Plain of Sharon stretches back from the sea for about fifteen miles to the foothills, where the elevation is from 500 to 600 feet. On this plain may be grown fine crops of wheat, barley, oats and other cereals. As to fruit, the fig, olive almost and apricot thrive wonderfully. These same cereals and fruits are grown on the higher elevations, but mature later in the season. The fruit and vegetable market of Jerusalem is, therefore, much prolonged, beginning early in the season and continuing late.

Last, but far from least to be considered in the agricultural possibilities of this land, is the wonderful Jordan Valley. This locality, though at present practically uncultivated, will no doubt some day become a most prominent factor in the development of the country. It stretches from the Dead sea northward, a distance of sixty-five miles, to the Lake of Galilee. Going out from this latter lake, the river Jordan, with a fall of 600 feet in sixty-five miles, traverses the entire length of the valley and empties into the Dead sea 6,000,000 tons of sweet water daily. This valley has been likened to a tropical oasis sunk in the midst of a temperate climate. The altitude, or rather depression, at the Lake of Galilee is 682 feet below sea-level, gradually falling off to about 1,300 feet at the shores of the Dead sea. Hence, we have a natural reservoir of beautiful fresh water fourteen miles long by eight broad, its greatest depth being 200 feet, with a daily supply of 6,000,000 tons of water, situated at the head of 200,000 acres of deep, rich alluvial soil seated in semi-tropical climate.

It is said by experts that the irrigation of this valley by canals leading along the foothills is quite feasible, and would turn the section into a veritable paradise. Here, owing to the great heat, everything grows with surprising rapidity, to an enormous size. Lucerne or alfalfa, under irrigation, produces ten crops a year. Bananas, oranges, sugar-cane, cotton and all the fruits of a semi-tropical climate can be raised. The cotton is perennial in growth and of a long, fine fiber. Fine wheat and barley are also produced. The growing season is prolonged throughout the whole year. The climate, though very hot during the summer months, is most delightful in winter.

East of the Jordan Valley the hills rise again to a height somewhat greater than the western ridge. Eastern Palestine is a great plateau, well watered and fertile throughout its length. This is an admirable wheat growing district, where as fine wheat fields may be seen as exist anywhere in the world.

This section has very few towns, as most of the inhabitants are nomadic Bedouins. Here a small number of Circassians have established themselves and built villages. They are far more energetic than the Bedouins and cultivate the ground in such a way as to get abundant crops.

Then there is the Beer Sheba district of southern Palestine, celebrated for its fine wheat and barley, which, in a good season, yields today, just as in Bible times, a hundredfold. This region is also inhabited by Bedouins and agriculture is carried on by the crudest methods. It also has an artesian underflow which can be utilized for irrigation. Water is found at a depth of from forty to fifty feet. Much more might be said of certain other localities, such as the rich prehistoric Plain of Esdraelon and the Valley of Dothan, which, under proper cultivation, yield as fine crops as the best land in the United States. But this is self evident to the casual observer. What needs especial exemplification, though well understood by the student of agriculture, is how the now barren, rocky hills can be transformed into productive fruit orchards.

As has been mentioned, Palestine is distinctly a limestone country, and the very stones which the passer-by thinks are the curse of the land are its salvation. In civilized countries it is the practice to fertilize all cultivated land and were this precaution neglected for a considerable length of time it would cease to yield profitable crops. This country, on the other hand, has been farmed for thousands of years absolutely without fertilization. Furthermore, the cattle manure is carefully collected from the fields, dried and used for fuel, so that the land is robbed of what little it might get from that material. What saves it is the continual disintegration of the limestone giving the soil that property that enables it to make use of the nitrogen in the air. The nitrogen gathering bacteria are present in every locality. Moreover, the porous rocks underground seem to hold the moisture throughout the summer, so that it may be gradually utilized by tree roots and summer plants during the long dry season.

Where in the United States or Europe could a crop of beans, peas, vegetable-marrows, watermelons or cucumbers be raised absolutely without rain or irrigation? But it is constantly done here. When the fellah wishes to plant a summer crop he lets his land lie fallow during the rainy season, and when he is reasonably sure the rain is finished (because the best result is obtained without any rain at all), he scratches the ground a few inches deep with his crude plow, such as Abraham might have used, puts in the seed, cultivates occasionally to keep down the weeds, and his crop is insured.

In some localities, as Bethlehem, fine olive groves exist, and on land no better originally than thousands of acres at present lying waste and to all appearances worthless. There is hardly a rocky hill any where in the country that would not offer good facilities for the thriving of these unique and exceedingly profitable trees. But one asks: If this is the case, why are not these hillsides everywhere green with the olive? For the simple reason that such a ruinous system of taxation has existed for so long that not only has the poor peasant been robbed of all ambition to plant, but is only too glad to cut down these venerable trees and sell the wood for fuel rather than pay a tax that amounts to more than the tree yields him.

The almond is another tree that thrives on rocky soil, and had Palestine a proper government, so that tree planting would be encouraged, no doubt large almond groves would spring into being, as this favorite nut is always in demand and not being of a perishable nature, is easily handled and exported.

The fig tree probably adapts itself to rocky places better than any other. These may sometimes be seen growing upside-down from the roof of a cave. All fruits are, at present, of common, unimproved varieties. The idea is very deep-rooted among the natives that any endeavor to improve the methods of their forefathers would be the greatest arrogance. And for this reason everything has retrograded rather than improved. "Abraham did it this way—God forbid that we should be better than our Father Abraham." However, when the grafting of better varieties is practiced the results are most satisfactory.

The matter of rainfall of this country is of especial interest, because during the last thirty years that the record has been kept at Jerusalem by the Palestine Exploration Fund, there has been a steady increase up to the present time from a yearly average of twenty-two inches to twenty-eight inches. The rain generally falls during the six months from November to April. The remaining six months are rainless. There are the "former rains" and the "latter rains." The "former rains" are very heavy and with storms, and come during December, January and February. The "latter rains" are of a more showery character and are necessary to mature the crops which have started with the "former rains." The native begun plowing as soon as the first rains have sufficiently moistened the soil.

What would strike the western reader as rather out of the ordinary is that the grape crop, which is probably the most abundant of all the fruits and which includes numerous delicious varieties, is matured entirely without rain or irrigation; in fact, the leaves do not appear before the dry season has set in. What is true of the grapes may also be said of all the summer fruits, including watermelons.

All this goes to show the peculiar property of soil and rock combination which to a great measure stores up this ample rainfall that it may be utilized by plants during the summer. Lucerne, grown without irrigation in the valleys, produces three crops a year and does not suffer seriously, if at all, in living through the long dry season, as the roots penetrate the crevices of the underlying rocks and find moisture. One year it fell beneath the writer's notice that the dry season lasted eight months, that is, this time elapsed before sufficient rain fell to moisten the ground to a depth of three inches, but this hardy plant was not in the least injured.

Around Jaffa and Haifa some few thrifty German colonies have been established and modern farm machinery is used with very fine results. Furthermore, there are in various localities throughout the country thriving agricultural colonies under the direction of the Jews. These were started on funds donated by Baron Edmund Rothschild and other philanthropic Jews of Europe.

Palestine is essentially an agricultural country, as it has absolutely no other resources, and in past times supported a large population. But it should be understood that to restore it to its former prosperity would require considerable capital and a radical form of government.

Though the Israelites came out of the very productive land of Egypt, their destination was described as a land flowing with milk and honey. This statement is most interesting in the light of facts concerning the production of honey here. It is well known to botanists that Palestine is the meeting place of the flora of three different continents, and this circumstance combined with the varied altitudes produces a condition most favorable to bee culture.

Some years ago two brothers living in Jaffa went into the apilary business. They conceived the idea of furnishing the bees with material for honey-making throughout eight months of the year by camping first at a low altitude and when the flowers of that locality were finished, moving the hives on camel back to a higher place, thus following up the consecutive blossoming of different wild flowers. They first let them work on the orange blossoms around Jaffa, and this fragrant honey was kept separate as was that obtained from each succeeding flower which pervaded any particular district. Thus, they were enabled to label their honey "Orange Blossom," "Thyme," etc.

The data shown by these gentlemen show a yield exceeding that yet known in any other country. By using modern American extracting machinery and replacing the combs, one hundred hives produced six tons of honey during eight months. That is 120 pounds to the hive. The average yield in Australia and America is thirty pounds to each hive and the maximum fifty. From these facts it is clear that this unique land is possessed of great natural advantages over other lands, not only in ordinary agricultural possibilities, but in this interesting matter of producing honey.

DARDANELLES AND WHEAT.

(New York Journal of Commerce.)

For many months the allies have been hammering away at the Dardanelles forts with limited success. What effect the capture of the Dardanelles might have on the question of peace can only be conjectured. Russian wheat has been bottled up for a full year, and not only would this be released for the markets of Europe, but the surplus of her coming crop would also be available. This would be a serious blow to American farmers, who have raised a record crop, with the idea that it can be sold as readily as that of last year. The United States has 300,000,000 bushels of wheat available for export, which would mean more than that in dollars. Russia may be presumed to have an equal amount stored from her enormous crop of 1914, even allowing for wastage due to the war, and it is likely to have as much again for the 1915 crop. But, making liberal allowances for all kinds of losses and diversions, Russia

OUR COLORED CITIZENS

The Emancipation Anniversary held at Scott's Chapel M. E. church September 22 was a memorable event. While the services were not as largely patronized as could be desired, a goodly number of the thoughtful and progressive citizens showed their appreciation of an event that must strike a tender chord in the heart of every loyal and thoughtful colored person.

Excellent music was furnished by the choir who with well trained voices and hearty interest, lent an additional charm to the occasion. The decorations were apt, illustrative and suggestive. The pictures of the great and immortal Lincoln and our own Fred Douglass surrounded by the emblems of our own glorious republic, were among the features that were not only attractive but inspiring. After a few introductory remarks by the pastor, Rev. E. W. S. Hammond, he introduced Mr. E. W. Lane, as master of ceremonies, whose interesting address met with hearty endorsement by the audience.

The vocal solo, "He Careth for the Sparrows," by Madam Toomsino, of Springfield, O., was received with generous applause, as was the instrumental solo by Prof. J. Marion Taylor, and "The Problem," written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, read by Mrs. A. G. Hammond in her usual impressive manner.

Rev. J. M. Literal, pastor of the Third Street M. E. church, spoke on "Lincoln, the Emancipator," followed by Rev. W. B. Campbell, pastor of the M. E. church, South, on "The Colored Man As His Own Emancipator." Prof. Humphries, principal of the colored public schools, followed in a brief but interesting address on "Now Does Emancipation Affect Our Boys and Girls?"

The addresses were of a very high order, eliciting generous applause and a unanimous vote of thanks.

A PERFECT PROGRAM.

This one has the merit of being true, anyhow: The official pessimist of a small western city, a gentleman who had wrestled with chronic dyspepsia for years, stood in front of the post-office as the noon whistles sounded.

"Twelve o'clock, eh?" he said, half to himself and half to an acquaintance. "Well, I'm going home to dinner. If dinner ain't ready I'm going to raise hell; and if it is ready I ain't going to eat a bite."

ENTERTAINED DELIGHTFULLY.

Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Dieterich entertained with a 6 o'clock dinner Thursday evening at their beautiful home, Edenbower, in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. W. Don Houston, of South Covington. Covers were laid for twelve. The centerpiece was a cut-glass basket filled with sunburst roses.

The Interest Displayed By the Ladies in the

demonstration has prompted us to give every lady who chooses to own one an opportunity to own one, so beginning on Wednesday, August 18th, 1915,

we are going to organize a club which will be limited to 25 members who can purchase an "Ideal" Fireless Cooker on the unheard of terms of $1 down, which delivers the cooker to your home, and then pay the balance in small weekly installments of $1 each.
